River Phoenix dies at age 23:

LOS ANGELES -- River Phoenix, whose natural intensity as a teen-age actor in the 1986 film "Stand by Me" launched his career, collapsed outside a nightclub early Sunday and died. He was 23.

Friends reported that Phoenix was "acting strange" as he left the Viper Room in West Hollywood about 1 a.m., said sheriff's Deputy Diane Hecht. She didn't elaborate.

Paramedics were called when the actor collapsed and he was rushed to Cedars Sinai Medical Center. He was pronounced dead shortly before 2 a.m.

"At this time the cause of death is under investigation. The exact cause will be determined at autopsy by the coroner," Hecht said.

The autopsy will probably be performed Monday, she said. Sheriff's detectives were handling the case, as a matter of routine, but "it's not a homicide investigation at this time," Hecht said.

A year after his 1985 film debut in "Explorers," Phoenix showed his star potential in director Rob Reiner's "Stand by Me."

In his brief career, Phoenix played a male hustler in Gus Van Sant's 1991 film "My Own Private Idaho" and portrayed a youthful computer hacker in the Robert Redford-led ensemble cast of 1992's "Sneakers."

His other films include "The Mosquito Coast" (1986) and "Indiana Jones and the Last Crusade," both with Harrison Ford, "Little Nikita" (1988) with Sidney Poitier, "A Night in the Life of Jimmy Reardon" (1988), and "Running on Empty" (1988).

Gunman shoots doctor in stomach

The Associated Press

CLEVELAND -- A doctor injured in a shooting at University Hospital was in fair condition Sunday, officials said.

Dr. E. Byron Marsolais, 55, of Shaker Heights, was shot in the abdomen Saturday night by a man whose identity had not been determined, police said. The man suffered a fractured skull, apparently in a struggle with Marsolais, police said. The man was in satisfactory condition Sunday at University Hospitals, said hospital spokeswoman Tamela Neisinger.

The man was dressed in a doctor's coat, but was probably wearing it to try and get out of the hospital, said Fifth District Commander William Tell. Police were unable to talk to either man to determine what happened, but the unidentified man was under police guard. Police said there were no witnesses.

The shooting occurred about 7 p.m. on the fifth floor of the Harry J. Bolwell Health Center, police said.

A briefcase with a horror mask, an ice pick, a piece of pipe and bullets was found on the floor of an examining room near

OSU greeks discuss homosexuality

by Leah Barnum
environment reporter

"Coming out of the closet" is difficult for many homosexuals, but problems may be compounded when they reveal their sexual preferences to their fellow sorority or fraternity members.

David Casto and Paul Stevens, members of Ohio State University's chapter of Chi Phi fraternity, spoke to University students about what it is like to be gay members of the greek community.

The men were guests at an open forum Thursday night which was organized by the Order of Omega.

When three of the four gay members of the 38-member Chi Phi chapter openly admitted they were gay two years ago, "everyone [in the fraternity] was totally floored," Casto said.

Casto, who had a girlfriend for about six months during that year, had everyone fooled, and so did the others, he said.

"Being in the closet requires a lot of planning and energy," Casto said. "Fags are some of the best actors in the world."

Although "fag" and "queer" are generally derogatory terms for homosexuals, they jokingly refer to each other as such, which is acceptable, Casto said.

"It's a move to reclaim the language," he said.

When they first publicly came out, people reacted dramatically at first, Stevens said.

The first month was difficult because many members had a lot of questions about the gay members' lifestyles, Stevens said. In addition, he said members were concerned that people interested in joining the fraternity would not because some of the members were openly gay.

"Everyone was terrified that someone outside of the chapter would find out and it would hurt our Rush," he said. "But in the end, it blew over and the people who had a problem with it were people we didn't want or need in the chapter."

Some people just drifted from the organization, Casto said.

Although the men have resentment toward the government and the military for their homophobic behavior, they do not feel the same toward their brothers, Casto said.

The situation has brought them closer together, Casto said.

They chose to come out because they want to have the same rights as everyone else, Casto said.

"The reason I feel like I have to be out is because I only have one life to live and I want those 80 or so years to be comfortable and fulfilling," he said. "I don't want

Germans attack American luge team members

The Associated Press

BERLIN -- German rightist extremists insulted and beat up two members of the American men's luge team in training at an eastern German winter resort, police said Saturday.

The assault occurred shortly before midnight Friday in the Kurpark-Klaus discotheque in Oberhof, a small town about 150 miles southwest of Berlin.

About 15 known German rightists, all in their 20s, "told the Americans when they came in to get lost," said regional police chief Karl-Heinz Malina in nearby Suhl.

A fistfight broke out after the Germans "heavily insulted" two of the Americans in the group who were black, police said in a statement. They did not say what words were used.

Police said a 26-year-old black American, who was not identified, sustained facial bruises but was not seriously injured.

Robert Pipkins, who is black, apparently was the target of the attack, said Bob Hughes, the U.S. Luge Association's marketing director.

Pipkins, the 1992 junior world champion and a student at Drexel University in Philadelphia, pushed one of the assailants, and Duncan Kennedy of Lake Placid, N.Y., stepped in to divert the attackers and took the brunt of the punishment while teammates hustled Pipkins out a back door, Hughes said.

Malina said police were called and five Germans were arrested. He said he believed the Americans were attacked because the Germans, all from Suhl, were "hostile to foreigners."

Attacks on foreigners by rightist extremists have become a cause of serious concern in Germany in the three years since unification.

Californians step up to help fire victims in need

by Jeff Barnard
The Associated Press

LAGUNA BEACH, Calif. -- Jack and Elaine Lund lost their home, clothing and 25 years of memories when a wildfire leveled their house near Emerald Bay.

But when they went to church Sunday in newly purchased clothes, they volunteered one of their few remaining possessions to help others left homeless in last week's firestorm. They offered the use of their pickup truck to carry victims' belongings.

"There may be people worse off than us," said Lund, who retired from the Army in 1968 and ran a golf cart distributorship afterward. "We lost all the material things of the house, which means nothing."

At St. Catherine of Siena Roman Catholic Church in Laguna Beach, and at churches and homes around Southern California, people like the Lunds were stepping forward to help. And they were counting their blessings that, despite the destruction wrought by fires that flared up with a blast of Santa Anas, no body was killed.

Thirteen major fires in a 200-mile stretch from Ventura County to the Mexican border torched 167,700 acres, damaged or destroyed 787 buildings, including at least 650 homes, and injured 62. A preliminary estimate from the state Office of Emergency Services put damage at $500 million.

The Laguna Beach fire, which destroyed 366 homes and businesses and charred 16,680 acres of brush and suburban landscape, was contained within a line of bare earth. A destructive 5,700-acre blaze above Altadena was 60 percent contained but burning away from homes into the mountains northeast of Los Angeles and a 39,000-acre fire in Ventura County was 90 percent contained.

High clouds drifted over most of the region, maintaining cool, moist weather that helped firefighters get the upper hand on the fires. But the forecast lent urgency to efforts by hundreds of firefighters who rushed to the area from across California and the West.

The National Weather Service said the Santa Anas -- hot desert winds from the east or northeast in Southern California -- could begin blowing again Monday night and Tuesday. The winds are expected to blow at 20 mph to 30 mph with gusts up to 45 mph -- milder than the winds that spread the wildfires.

Out-of-town crews were handling the heavy work of snuffing hot spots with hand tools, said Capt. Michael Wilson, a California Department of Forestry firefighter in Riverside County.

"If we get the hard winds, we're looking at everything happening all over again," Wilson said. "We need to get everybody fed and rested."

In the tourist center of this affluent town of 24,000, there was little sign Sunday of the devastation that occurred nearby. Tourists packed shops and espresso bars near the Pacific beach. An occasional Red Cross truck drove by.

At St. Catherine, the view was of green lawns, brilliant red bougainvillea vines and ocean. But a smell of smoke hung in the air and parishioners traded stories of their losses.

The church has run out of room to store all the donated clothing, and has 100,000 pounds of food to give away, said the Rev. Bill Krekelberg.

Endorsements for council seats

Incumbent B.J. Fisher wants what everybody wants for Bowling Green -- a place where there is a high quality of living and where every man can earn a decent wage. We at The News believe that the Ward 2 candidate will accomplish this goal, as well as the others he has outlined for the next two years.

Fisher is a strong supporter of lowering the utility cost in Bowling Green and promises to work to improve the lines of communication between the permanent residents and the students in Ward Two and all of Bowling Green.

Fisher is a native of Bowling Green and he said he is familiar with landlord-tenant relations and will strive to provide his constituents with clean, healthy living accommodations.

He has the know-how to accomplish his goals and will strive to work with the students, not against them. For these reason, The News supports B.J. Fisher in the Ward Two city council race.

Current Ward Three Councilwoman Jan Partin, a Democrat, should be re-elected to office over Republican opponent Becky Hansen. Although Partin has only been on council since spring of this year, when she replaced temporarily retiring Republican Robert McGeein, she has a good grasp of what her constituents want and need.

Partin has been looking into plans to extend South Maple Street to relieve traffic congestion caused by rapid economic development on the south side of the city. She is also working to extend sewer lines to Ward Three residents who have been going without. Partin has more experience than her opponent and a clearer problem-solving plan to help Ward Three residents.

Republican Stuart Stearns is our choice as the best representative for Bowling Green Ward Four City Councilman.

Stearns, a 32 year veteran in the Bowling Green City School district, but a relative newcomer on the political scene, pledges to do his best to ensure relatively equal distributions of wards once the Supreme Court rules on the redistricting issue.

A former teacher's union president and Bowling Green High School football coach, Stearns said he will also focus on the need for a fire station on the west side of town.

Perception taints gender views

Men and women are so different in so many ways. They feel in different ways, they act in different ways, and usually they have vastly different interests and ways of going about those interests.

Here's a word that everyone should think about -- perception. It is the perception men and women have of these differences that makes so much turmoil between the sexes. Perhaps this turmoil has something to do with the high rate of divorce, and perhaps it has something to do with sexism.

Different cultures are the same way. Black, hispanic and white people face the troubles of going outside their own perceptions. Thus, a lack of understanding is bred. It is difficult to understand the cultures, beliefs and feelings of oppression outside everyone's own peers. Our perceptions not only breed sexism, but also racism.

Women, Africans and Hispanics all feel oppressed in their social and career surroundings. It is true, sometimes they are oppressed. As a woman I have felt oppressed sometimes. It is difficult to understand that every opportunity is not opened to me. If I desired, not that I do, to fight on the front lines in battle I would not be allowed to do what I desire.

I really never thought of the feminist movement seriously because I never felt really oppressed. But one day I was told by a friend that a motel did not hire women for the graveyard shift, desk position because it was not safe for them -- they may get raped.

It made me angry that someone else made a decision that I could have responsibly made for myself. I did not like the fact that someone else thought they had to "protect" me. It made me very angry.

Unfortunately, the anger among the oppressed does not single out the oppressor. Instead, it usually singles out white, American men. Some white men in the past may have been oppressors, and some may still be. Singling out all white, American men as the 'enemy' is prejudice. It is safe to say that white American men face the most prejudice. White men face a different kind of oppression, but it is still a type of oppression. They are being attacked from all sides. Women, Africans and Hispanics are all attacking the white male, and together they outnumber their population. Anger, anger, anger -- strike, strike, strike.

Anger only breeds more anger. Rationality and understanding is the answer to alleviating the tension between the sexes and the races. If someone is attacked, it is only natural that they attack back. The trouble is that it does not solve anything, but instead stirs up more tension.

Robin Coe

White, American men have been oppressed. It affects their jobs because businesses are pressured into hiring a certain number of women and minorities. Sometimes this works fine and sometimes it becomes discriminatory on the white male's part. White men may be cheated out of a position that they are highly qualified for because they do not reach the sex or race need of the business.

I know of a store which does not allow men to have desk jobs in the back, only women. Discrimination?

Sexism and racism are very heated topics which involve a lot of personal feelings. Discussion is the answer to resolve the mixed feelings and mixed perceptions, not anger.

Everyone has to remember that all people feel slighted in some way. Violent activism will not solve the problems. The Los Angeles riots did not solve any problems. Instead the riots stirred up more controversy and more anger, pushing Americans farther away from a racial and sexual resolution this nation desperately needs.

Slowly, racism and sexism is being redirected to another population of people. Referring to the injustice in the Denny trial verdicts, it is clear that white, American males may be the next, future victims of unfair treatment.

The misunderstanding of perceptions exists at this university, also. Students who feel angry or slighted because of prejudice and students who are prejudiced should seek out discussion groups and resolve the problem.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Debate audience saw a circus

The BG News:

On Tuesday, Oct. 25 at 9 p.m. I attended a debate for the candidates running for the First Ward city council seat. I have been a permanent resident of Bowling Green since I began school in 1991. As a concerned citizen, I became interested in local politics. I went to this "debate" hoping to hear about what these candidates could do for me. This "debate" turned into a three ring circus when Republican, University student, current councilman Scott Ziance lost control and began shouting that one of the candidates was a liar.

No matter what the reason, in no public situation should one of our "leaders" conduct himself in the manner in which Mr. Ziance did. Did he believe that he was acting for the city? Or was he participating in political slander for his friend Todd Kleismit? I believe Mr. Ziance could have better communicated his point if he would have sat down and written his opinions here at The News. Or perhaps he was acting for his girlfriend (and no I'm not afraid to say her name!).

I have met Carolyn Aldrich in passing a few times and I must say I'm very confused. I have known Carolyn-the-College-Democrat, Carolyn-the-Maybe-I'll-Run-As-Independent-No-It's-Too-Much-Work and now Carolyn-the-Loyal-Republican-Supporter.

Miss Aldrich seemed to be the source of all the ruckus going on. It was all very confusing and disturbing, but the gist of the situation was while working on the "Take A Stand" platform Miss Aldrich was concerned about an issue, she reported some statistics back to her group and later quit the group because of obvious personal reasons. Why would members of "Take A Stand" question Miss Aldrich's information? At the time she was an active candidate seeking a political position, but now that she is dating Mr. Ziance her findings are no longer true?

Whoa! If Miss Aldrich would have remained a candidate she would have used that data as her own. Thank the heavens that this never happened. If I may be so bold as to suggest to Miss Aldrich that should she ever return to politics (God save Bowling Green), that she be more careful.

She angered many people, women in particular, by changing political parties based on who she's dating and setting back women's lib about 70 years. I truly believed that the 90's woman could stand on her own two feet, yet Miss Aldrich conducts herself like a rock-and-roll groupie.

With only a week to go in this election, it is obvious that Todd Kleismit's Republican supporters have pushed the panic button. Finding themselves in third place, they feel that the only way to win is to attack the Independent front-runner.

They are wrong. You see, nice guys finish first, Miss Aldrich. That's why we'll see Sam Melendez, not the angry and desperate Todd Kleismit, sitting in the First Ward seat come January.

The BG News:

I'd like to respond to the Oct. 10 BG News column "Ideology determines issues."

Mr. Ihle, ideology determines a person's perspective on a given situation leading them to decide what they think the issue is, a fact your column suggests you don't understand. To uncover a truth, you should reason with the least bias possible by taking your own ideological perspective into account.

Modern conservatives (excluding extremists) do not value "tradition for traditions sake," nor do they want government to force people to get along. Listen to yourself when you say, "modern liberalism values economic equality over unrestrained capitalism; in other words government should force people to 'get along' economically."

Today's conservative says if the patient is ill, we want to help but if a successful operation is likely to kill the patient, let's try something else first. As for tradition, it arises because, for a time at least, it allows society (which is a system) to function. Radically altering an existing system always brings about unpredictable results because all relevant factors can not be anticipated.

Modern liberals beware, you don't create that which you claim to oppose.

Russell Wangler
Sophomore

The BG News:

Todd Kleismit is a veteran of Desert Storm and he is older and more experienced than his opponents. I know Todd Kleismit to be a very enthusiastic, hard working, moral person with strong convictions for serving the city.

Todd Kleismit is able and willing to listen to the needs of our community and to work with permanent residents of the First Ward and with students to help solve problems. In addition I know Todd Kleismit to be concerned with the entire city's budget needs and restrictions to make sure our city government keeps costs down while providing a high level of service.

I think, as a fellow resident to the First Ward, that you should make the effort to vote, and to vote for the right Todd for the job.

Heritage month winds down

Puerto Rican author speaks of childhood experiences

by Ginger Phillips
human diversity reporter

As one of the final festivities of Hispanic Heritage Month, the Latino Student Union sponsored a presentation Thursday night by a Puerto Rican author who spoke about her childhood in the United States and how her experiences influenced her writing.

Nicholas Mohr, addressed the topic "Growing Up Latino In the United States: A Journey of Survival" in McFall Gallery to several University students.

Many of the books Mohr has written, including "Felita," "Going Home" and "Shoes for Hector" are based on her family's experiences.

"Felita" is the story of a young Latino girl and her family who moved into an all white neighborhood. Felita and her family suffered emotional and physical abuse from the community and were forced to move out of the neighborhood, Mohr said.

She said in the sequel entitled "Going Home" Felita spent the summer in Puerto Rico - the home of her parents - where she encountered more discrimination, this time for being a "Yankee."

"I write very specifically what I know. If it comes from inside, people can identify," Mohr said.

Mohr said she was born and raised in an urban village of New York where the Spanish language was the main form of communication. However, outside her community, there was little representation of her culture.

Mohr said when she was young and searching for library books about her background and culture, none could be found.

Schools did not provide adequate representation either, she said.

Movies and other media often negatively portray Latino women, placing them in roles such as prostitutes, Mohr said.

Although Mohr had an extended Latino family outside of her community, she was unaware of it and therefore had a lack of role models to identify with, she said.

Mohr said one of the reasons she likes writing is because she is able to communicate with many different types of people.

Report reveals gender biases in law schools

The Associated Press

COLUMBUS -- Many women in the state's nine law schools felt they were hampered by gender bias in the classroom, according to a report that examined the responses of students and faculty members.

The 32-member Joint Task Force on Gender Fairness, an effort of the Ohio State Bar Association and the Ohio Supreme Court, released its report last week.

"The most startling finding from two surveys of the law students and faculty was the persistence of differences in the perceptions of men and women," said Ohio State University law professor Joan M. Krauskopf, head of the committee that conducted the study at Ohio's nine law schools.

Forty percent of women suffered lower self-esteem and felt less intelligent and articulate after attending law school, compared with 16 percent of male students, the report said.

The leading female faculty members said they felt they were at a disadvantage when the administration saw them as aggressive, while men were rewarded for aggressiveness.

Minority women students reported the greatest perception of differential treatment.

Fifty-six percent of the female faculty members said they felt they had to work harder to prove their competence to students. That compared with 48 percent of female students overall and 73 percent of minority female students.

"The committee believes that, whether or not the law school experience has caused the many gender differences that affect women more negatively than men, law schools could lessen those differences and provide better preparation for an increasingly diverse professional life," the report said. The committee recommended that law school administrations establish and communicate such policies and take steps to assure gender fairness.

AAUP fights for spouses' benefits

KENT -- A Kent State University professor is trying to get health insurance benefits extended to partners of homosexual employees at the campus.

Robert Johnson, an associate professor of sociology, filed a grievance after he tried unsuccessfully to enroll his partner in the university's health plan.

The American Association of University Professors filed the grievance in March and university officials failed to resolve the matter during meetings. The union took the case to an arbitrator, who recently set a hearing for Dec. 7.

"In our collective-bargaining agreement, it says there will be no discrimination for several things, including sexual preference," union President Richard Klich said Friday.

Charles L. Green, the university's vice president for human resources, has declined to comment on the matter.

A pending state bill could nullify a ruling in favor of the union. The bill, sponsored by Rep. Michael A. Fox, R-Hamilton, and 13 other Republican legislators, would forbid state agencies and institutions to grant benefits to gay and lesbian partners.

"Why should the university sanction a relationship that is not recognized under Ohio law?" Fox said.

"This is the beginning of a much broader battle. There are legal battles that fall out of elevating a homosexual relationship and treating it just like a marriage."

"This would affect every small business in the state, including the costs of health insurance," he said.

to be denied any of my human rights."

The men also discussed whether homosexuality was natural.

Casto said he believes homosexuality is predisposed, but that social dynamics may have an effect in determining sexual preference.

Homosexuality is more prevalent than many people perceive, Casto said. Although the Chi Phi fraternity members are more open about being gay than other groups are, Casto believes 15 to 18 percent of the OSU Greek community are gay.

Although men are more open about being gay, many sorority members are as well, said Steven Cullingsworth, graduate administrative associate of Greek affairs at OSU.

More men come out because they do not have to deal with the other social oppressions that women do, he said.

People need to be educated about homosexuality, Greek life and what happens when the two are combined, Casto said.

"If you have a stereotype in your mind, it's easier to project hate onto people," he said.

One of the myths which members of the gay community try to end is that gays sleep with every other gay person they meet, Stevens said.

"I understand that I'll spend the rest of my life educating people," Casto said.

Although Casto said he spends a lot of time tongue in cheek, making fun of straight people, he does not impose upon their lifestyles or resent their existence, he said.

On the other hand, many people resent the existence of homosexuals, Casto said.

"We're all a part of one big picture and that's Greek life," said David Strauss, coordinator of Greek affairs at OSU.

Registration may Men indicted in boating accident bring jury duty

by Shari L. Veleba

People registered to vote in Wood County are also eligible to be chosen for another of life's civic duties -- jury duty.

Mary Beth Crawford, deputy jury commissioner for the Wood County Court of Common Pleas, said sometimes students who have registered to vote here do not realize they have also put themselves in the running for jury duty.

"Most students don't feel that they reside in Wood County, but if they register to vote here and live here most of the year, they are residents," she said.

However, Crawford said sometimes students forget voter registration rules.

"They need to know they can be registered [to vote] in only one county," she said.

About 20 percent of all jurors are students, Crawford said.

There have been instances of students who have registered to vote in Wood County who have come to regret it. Some report not knowing they registered, said Mary Lou Eman, the director of the Wood County Board of Elections.

Emans said some students do not pay attention to what they sign when they are registered by volunteers on campus.

"We had one student who didn't know what she signed," she said.

Emans said that student wanted to be taken off the rolls here in order to vote in their home county, but that is something that cannot be done by phone.

She said to be removed from the rolls, people must first re-register in their home county. The board of elections office there sends a card to the Wood County office, which then takes the name off the local list.

Not voting for four years will also eliminate a person from voting rolls, Emans said.

"They're automatically taken off," she said.

Crawford said annually, about 6,000 people are selected by computer as prospective jurors. There are 65,448 registered voters in Wood County.

While some counties in the state select a jury pool from the list of licensed drivers, most rely on voter registration rolls. Crawford said Wood County has no immediate plans to change its system.

"The court feels we are getting sufficient numbers through voter registration lists," she said.

Aggravated vehicular homicide, assault indictments handed down

The Associated Press

TOLEDO -- A Lucas County grand jury has indicted two men on charges related to a June boating accident that killed two people and injured two others.

Williams Rose, of Temperance, Mich., and Douglas Gobbell, 28, of Toledo, were charged with aggravated vehicular homicide and aggravated vehicular assault in the indictment handed down Friday.

Witnesses said the two were racing their speedboats June 11 on the Ottawa River. The witnesses said both men left a riverside bar when Rose's boat hit a third boat driven by William C. Davis, Jr., of Toledo.

Davis and his passenger, Mike Beach, 31, of Temperance, were killed. Two others in Davis' boat were injured.

The Ohio Department of Natural Resources investigated the crash and gave its findings to the Lucas County prosecutor's office.

Kevin Carder, an assistant Lucas County prosecutor, said authorities believed both Rose and Gobbell were to blame for the crash.

Judge Charles Doneghy released Rose on Friday without a cash bond.

A warrant has been issued for the arrest of Gobbell, Carder said.

Victim wins anti-stalking conviction

Woman worries that Cleveland man may come back for revenge

The Associated Press

CLEVELAND -- The first victim to win a conviction under Ohio's year-old anti-stalking law said she was grateful for the security she received but feared it would not last.

The man convicted of stalking Debra Cardona served five months of a six-month sentence.

Prosecutors said Ray Vlna, 48, of Cleveland, followed Cardona, slashed her tires, left obscene messages on her telephone answering machine and mailed pornography to her.

Cardona said that two weeks after he was released from jail Vlna was back on her street and near her work place. A probation hearing was held, and Vlna was sentenced to another 30 days.

"I'm beginning to wonder if six months is enough," Cardona told The Plain Dealer for a story published Sunday. "I mean, my life will never be the same. I will always look over my shoulder and wonder if he will come back for revenge."

More than 30 states have anti-stalking laws. Rep. Madeline Cain, D-Lakewood, introduced Ohio's measure after one of her constituents was stalked and killed in 1991.

Cain said she believes the law will become more effective as people become familiar with it.

"I guess that you still have to have enough evidence to support a case, and the victim has to live in fear," she said.

Stalking is hard to prove, and the punishment does not deter the offender who is obsessive, say lawyers and judges.

A first offense is punishable by up to six months in jail and a $1,000 fine. The maximum penalty for a second conviction is three years in prison.

The law punishes acts that individually may not be criminal offenses but considered together could result in injury or death.

"Is driving up and down a street a crime?" said Gina Villa, who prosecuted Vlna. "No. Is asking someone on a date a crime? No. Is sending pictures a crime? No. Is showing up at a bar she drinks at a crime? No."

A man convicted of stalking a John Carroll University student was ordered to undergo psychiatric evaluation before being sentenced.

According to University Heights police records, Jon Killian, 31, of Cleveland Heights, followed the student and went to the campus with a loaded handgun he planned to use to propose marriage to the woman.

Shaker Heights Municipal Judge Virgil Brown Jr. acknowledged concern for the student's safety in the future but said the anti-stalking law works.

"It allows the system to intervene before someone is injured," he said.

California man murders two in shooting spree

by Amanda Covarrubias
The Associated Press

EL CAJON, Calif. — A man shooting from a second-floor apartment killed two people and wounded five others Saturday before fire engulfed the apartment.

A man was found dead inside the apartment of undetermined causes, his body burned, Lt. Bill McClurg said.

Police said the man's identity could not be immediately determined and it wasn't known if he was the apartment's tenant. McClurg said, however, that the man who lived there was known to be somewhat of a loner.

"We know that he was a recluse-type individual who didn't like noise, didn't like people around him," McClurg said.

The gunman fired intermittently for about an hour. In a chaotic scene as shots still sounded, neighbors and firemen worked feverishly on one child with a gaping wound lying in the street.

Just two weeks ago, 19-year-old James M. Buquet began shooting in a crowded health club in El Cajon, 15 miles northeast of San Diego. He killed one man on the sidewalk and three women inside before killing himself.

"Lightning usually doesn't strike twice, but this time it did," Police Chief Jack Smith said. "You think this can't happen in your community, but it can happen in any community."

The dead woman was found in a Central Assembly of God church parking lot below the sniper's window. Also killed was a girl, whose age was variously listed by police as 8 or 5.

Their names were not released.

Two of the wounded were treated at hospitals and released but conditions of others were not immediately known, Smith said.

He said he did not believe his officers fired at the gunman.

During their three-week terms, 320 jurors remain "on call" to potentially serve as a juror in either a civil or criminal case within the court system, she said.

The length of terms sometimes scares students, she said.

"People think that when you're on call for jury service you have to come in every day. You don't," she said. "Usually jury service entails one to three days of your term."

Civil cases, which involve someone seeking reimbursement, require eight jurors with one alternate, while criminal cases require 12 jurors and one alternate.

To reach that number, Crawford said 32 names are chosen for each case.

She said she hopes prospective jurors see the duty as educational.

"I'd like them to look on it as a positive experience," she said.

Jurors are paid $15 per day and $10 for a half-day of jury service from the county's general fund, Crawford said.

If a student is chosen for a three-week term but is overwhelmed with work, Crawford said the court cannot release the student from jury duty but will "work with them."

"They can be moved to another term," she said. "They cannot be exempted from their three week term."

SHOOTING

where the shooting occurred. It was believed to have belonged to the unidentified man, Tell said.

Marsolais is an orthopedic surgeon involved in research on computer-controlled electric stimulation systems for helping paralyzed patients walk.

He also is chief of rehabilitation at the Cleveland Veterans Affairs Medical Center and associate professor of orthopedics at Case Western Reserve University.

Marsolais was shot in an examining room near his offices on the fifth floor. It was not unusual for Marsolais to work on a Saturday night, Tell said.

Two shots were fired, one of which struck Marsolais in the abdomen and another that went into the ceiling, Tell said. A .38-caliber pistol that may belong to the unidentified man was recovered in a nearby room, Tell said.

Marsolais called the switchboard to tell them he had been shot. The other man was caught by hospital security near a third floor elevator.

Tell said police did not know how the man got into the hospital.

"Until we talk to somebody we don't know what happened," he said.

Todd Wessler for City Council - Ward One

Todd talks issues with voters

Paid for by the Wood Co. Democrats
A.R. Baldwin, Chair, P.O. Box 707 B.G., OH 43402

Todd Wessler: The Issues

Todd Wessler has clearly emerged as the candidate of the issues. During the past eight months, Todd has issued a series of fifteen position papers on the vital issues facing Bowling Green. Among Todd's goals:

- * Will work to make certain that First Ward streets and sidewalks are maintained and improved.
- * Will work to expand the recycling program to all apartments and offices
- * Will explore options for off-campus Greek Housing.

To get a copy of Todd's detailed platform call 352-7742 and you will be sent his book.

Todd Wessler for City Council - Ward One

Todd Wessler: Communication

It is obvious from Todd's extensive door to door campaign that he places a strong emphasis on communication. He knows that communication is essential if we are to improve relations between council members and their constituents and if we are to improve relations between students and long-time residents.

- * If elected, Wessler will visit every resident of Ward One three times each year.
- * Wessler will donate 30% of his salary to putting out a newsletter to inform Ward One residents of council business
- * Todd Wessler will speak to every community and campus group twice a year.

Todd speaks with a citizen about her concerns.

Report uncovers impure fruit juice

The Associated Press

NEW YORK -- The production of adulterated fruit juice that is supposed to be pure is a widespread practice that costs consumers an estimated $1.2 billion a year and exposes them to undisclosed chemicals, according to a published report.

Chemists who specialize in testing food samples estimate that about 10 percent of the country's $12 billion pure fruit juice industry is adulterated in some way, The New York Times reported Sunday.

The most common adulterants are sugar or watery orange by-products, but in some recent cases manufacturers have used preservatives not approved as safe for use in juice, the newspaper said. Orange juice makes up about half of the country's pure juice industry.

Regulators at the federal Food and Drug Administration, which oversees the food industry, had hoped that tainted juice would become less common after the prosecution of Beech-Nut Nutrition Corporation in 1987.

Beech-Nut paid a $2 million fine for illegally selling "apple juice" that was really sweetened water and chemicals. But recent cases all involved activities that continued after that landmark case, the Times said.

FDA Commissioner David A. Kessler said Friday his agency was determined to prosecute juice adulteration cases when it could muster evidence to support a criminal case.

"And these are serious prosecutions," Kessler said. "People are going to jail."

But he added that the juice industry remains a trouble exception to what he said were his agency's generally successful efforts to combat food adulteration.

GARDEN CITY, Kan. -- It hasn't been lost on Kansans like registered nurse Chris McKinney that Bob Dole has toned down his criticism of President Clinton when it comes to health care.

"I saw a couple of T-shirts that said, 'Dole, sit down and shut up!'" McKinney said, reflecting on the senior senator from Kansas who, as minority leader, is also the titular head of the Republican Party.

"I've wondered these past couple of months if maybe he's getting the message -- people want somebody who's going to be part of the solution, rather than just fanning the fire," she said.

Judging by the reaction in a Garden City high school auditorium, where McKinney and about 300 others gathered over the weekend for a health care "summit," Dole is doing a fine minuet, balancing a ready-to-compromise stand on Clinton's health plan with his role as GOP guardian against high costs, big bureaucracy and government mandates on business.

"He's being flexible," said Wendy Klamp, marketing director at a psychiatric hospital in Shawnee, Kan., who was at a similar forum in Kansas City, Mo., on Friday when Dole shared the stage with Hillary Rodham Clinton.

Klamp, like many of the other Kansans who attended these summits, thinks the health system needs reform. But Clinton's plan seems so far-reaching, they said, and they're worried about a huge new bureaucracy. Klamp's relying on Republicans like Dole to protect against too much government intrusion that would ruin what's good about the current system.

"I'm very much for finding a way to cover everyone, but I know how inefficient the government can be," said Bill Schaezel, a pathologist from Lawrence, Kan., who was handing out, and trying to sell, bumper stickers that said, "Health care expensive now? Just wait until they make it free!"

"I'm a big Dole fan. He knows it's such a big issue out in the country, you can't come at it as just an adversary," Schaezel said.

Dole, since taking over as spokesman, of sorts, for the Republican Party after George Bush lost the White House, has seemed to relish the role as chief adversary on Clinton's budget package and other initiatives.

But health care has been a different story. Dole is backing a GOP rival bill that Mrs. Clinton has called "far superior" to even an alternative offered by Democrats because the GOP plan tries to bring health coverage to everyone. Kansas' other Republican senator, Nancy Kassebaum, is a sponsor, too.

The biggest applause of the day did not go to Dole, when he laid out why the Clinton plan might be too bureaucratic or costly or burdensome on business, but to the more conservative Rep. Pat Roberts, when he talked about the American Dream, climbing the ladder of success, and how health care should not be a "basic right" just handed out to everyone.

Dole spoke of individual responsibility, but it wasn't the fiery stuff Roberts used.

"We haven't touched on responsibility enough," Dole said. "It's in the president's plan. It's last. It ought to be first."

The idea was on the crowd's mind. Why should hard-working citizens have to pay for people who haven't taken care of themselves, or AIDS crises in other cities, came a question from the crowd.

Kassebaum responded there are behavior problems everywhere, such as smoking and drunken driving. And Americans are already paying for those costs, she said.

The Republican bill puts the mandate for health coverage on individuals, rather than on businesses, as Clinton's plan would do. This GOP alternative, whose lead author is Sen. John Chafee of Rhode Island, would try to enforce it through the IRS. People would have to carry health insurance, just like many states require auto coverage. Poor people would get government vouchers to help them buy it.

Alabama man fights child support order

by Jay Reeves
The Associated Press

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. -- An Alabama man fighting a child support order has the backing of feminists and the Clinton administration as he asks the U.S. Supreme Court to overturn a paternity ruling decided by an all-woman jury.

James E. Bowman claims a state court order to pay $415 a month to support a 4-year-old son is unfair because no men served on the jury.

The Justice Department and 17 women's and civil rights groups have filed papers siding with Bowman. They seek an even broader ruling from the court, one that would forbid disqualification of potential jurors solely because of their sex.

Kim Gandy, executive vice president of the National Organization for Women in Washington, concedes it is an unlikely alliance that is backing Bowman, who is married and has denied fathering the baby.

"Cases like this have to be argued on the principle rather than the facts," Gandy said in an interview. "What's at issue here is whether gender-based discrimination is permissible in our legal system for any reason."

The Supreme Court in 1986 said potential jurors cannot be eliminated because of their race. In May, the court said it would use Bowman's case to decide whether to extend that ruling to include sex. Arguments are set for Tuesday.

Bowman, who lives in northeastern Alabama, admitted having an affair with Teresa Bible beginning in February 1988, according to court documents, and the two spent five days together at a motel that August.

Bible testified that no contraception was used and that she had no other sexual partners until after her son was born in May 1989.

A blood test established a 99.92 percent probability that Bowman was the father. But he denied impregnating Bible.

Bowman's attorney, John F. Porter III, declined to provide Bowman's hometown and said his client would not comment on the lawsuit. Bible could not be located for comment.

The jury pool for the 1991 trial included 24 women and 12 men. The judge excused two men and one woman.

Attorneys hired by Jackson County to file the paternity claim for Bible removed nine men from the pool through peremptory challenges, which allow dismissal of potential jurors without explanation. The law firm has since declined to comment on the exclusions.

Bowman's attorney used his peremptory strikes to remove 10 women and the last man.

Porter argued that an all-female jury should not hear the case, but the trial went ahead. Jurors decided Bowman was the father, and a judge ordered him to pay child support.

Violence grows in N. Ireland's cities

by Shawn Pogatchnik
The Associated Press

BELFAST, Northern Ireland — The fast-food delivery man stepped out of his car, saw a man walking toward him and cowered on the cold pavement.

"I thought sure you were going to shoot me," the man said, after realizing his customer, an Associated Press reporter, was holding a wallet, not a gun.

Belfast has become a city of empty midnight streets where a strange face or a sudden movement can trigger fear.

Outsiders, buoyed by positive words from politicians in Dublin and London, talk of peace between the Roman Catholic and Protestant communities. But in Northern Ireland, the reality is relentless killing.

The past eight days have been among the bloodiest in a quarter-century years of political and sectarian violence. Twenty-three people were killed, including seven gunned down Saturday night as they celebrated Halloween.

The province's Roman Catholic minority in particular fears the surge in indiscriminate killings by pro-British Protestant gunmen, who have killed more people this year than the outlawed Irish Republican Army. The tally so far is Protestant paramilitaries 38, IRA 28.

"If you're Catholic in this stinking city you're a target, simple as that," said Paul Bready, 24, a Belfast student who was packing his bags to flee the British-ruled province.

"I'm off to Donegal" in the Republic of Ireland, Bready said. "There's no jobs there, but there's no Prods (Protestants) to shoot me while I'm drinking my pint either."

Many Catholic parents are keeping their children indoors after dark, forbidding them to go door to door for Halloween. Some popular bars are half-empty. Many people avoid shopping malls, fearful they could be shot.

A police officer in Greysteel, Northern Ireland inspects the Rising Sun pub, where gunmen killed seven people on Sunday. The past week has been Northern Ireland's bloodiest in decades.

Haitian rightists demand President Aristide's replacement

by David Beard
The Associated Press

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — Buoyed by the failure of a U.N. plan to return President Jean-Bertrand Aristide to power on schedule, about 200 chanting rightists marched Sunday to demand his replacement.

Other rightists considered a "constitutional coup" that would bar Aristide from office and replace him with a Supreme Court justice, although a leading official in the former Duvalier dictatorship emerged Sunday to demand power within the Aristide-backed transition government.

"Arrest Malval! Arrest Malval! Aristide's in deep trouble!" the demonstrators, referring to Aristide's prime minister, chanted outside the vacant National Palace in tune to "Farmer in the Dell."

One protester carried a black-and-red Duvalierist flag atop the statue to the Unknown Slave. Three older women carried color photographs of Francois "Papa Doc" Duvalier as the protesters marched toward the Normandie Bar, a hangout for army-backed civilian gangs known as "attaches."

"We're tired, we're finished with everything, we're going to form our own government!" shouted former Sen. Reynald Georges, a Duvalier supporter. Francois "Papa Doc" Duvalier and his successor son, Jean-Claude, ruled Haiti for nearly 29 years. The regime toppled after popular protests chased Jean-Claude "Baby Doc" from the country in 1986.

Georges said his supporters didn't have to storm the palace. "We cannot storm something that belongs to us," he told journalists in the Caribbean sun.

Asked about the two-thirds support reported for Aristide in the 1990 popular election, Georges could not restrain himself: "Eh-hah-hah! I am laughing."

Across the Avenue of Liberty, four military officers in civilian clothes watched the demonstration. On the street, a prominent businessman looked on sadly.

"I don't see how we are getting out of this thing," Gerald Allen said, referring to the blocked political and economic impasse. Three months ago, he closed his weekly Journal du Commerce, founded in 1954, because of the collapse of legitimate businesses in the face of thriving contraband market.

"There is nothing left to defend," Allen said.

"They [the rightists] say they are the people, but they are not the people. The people are in hiding," the Rev. Rene Giroux, a priest in an Aristide stronghold in the capital, later told The Associated Press.

Aristide supporters have been repressed since the military overthrew the elected president in September 1991. Premier Robert Malval was appointed by Aristide in August as part of a U.N. envisioning Aristide's return by Oct. 30, but the military has retained control of government ministries.

Although Malval, a businessman, has the respect of the international community, the rightists want to either remove him or force him away from Aristide.

U.S. and U.N. officials, who have imposed a worldwide oil and arms embargo on Haiti, have warned that a constitutional coup would violate the terms of the U.N. plan to restore democracy in Haiti. Despite missing Saturday's deadline for Aristide's return, the United Nations has asked Aristide, Cedras and presidents of both houses of Parliament to meet Wednesday in Haiti to push through the restoration of democracy.

Two miles away from the demonstrations, a shadowy figure from Haiti's past emerged on the veranda of the Hotel Oloffson to meet with journalists for the first time since his return from exile.

Franck Roumain, former Duvalierist mayor and police chief of Port-au-Prince, told reporters he was a man of peace hoping to promote "the salvation of the country."

Although saying he was not involved in politics, his appearance clearly was intended to show that he was an overt power in a country traditionally ruled by the gun. It came one day after a contemporary Duvalier leader, Claude Raymond, said he was forming a new political party.

Wisconsin's Terrell Fletcher runs for a touchdown in the second quarter of Wisconsin's 13-10 win over Michigan.

Badgers topple Wolverines

The Associated Press

MADISON -- Brent Moss went over 1,000 yards rushing and Wisconsin stopped a late Michigan drive at the 21-yard line Saturday as the Badgers beat the Wolverines 13-10 to stay in the running for the Big Ten title.

No. 21 Wisconsin (7-1, 4-1) ended a nine-game losing streak to Michigan, setting off a tumultuous celebration at chilly Camp Randall Stadium, where the game-time temperature was 32 degrees.

Several fans were injured during the immediate post-game celebration that knocked down a retaining fence, and at least half-dozen ambulances were summoned.

No. 24 Michigan (4-4, 2-3) failed to capitalize on numerous chances in the second half after falling behind 13-3 at the half.

Moss, who had 128 yards on 26 carries, became only the fifth player in Wisconsin history to rush for 1,000 yards in one season and the first since Larry Emery in 1985. He has rushed for 100 yards in seven straight games and has 1,079 this season.

The Badgers took their half-time lead with a late 80-yard drive capped by Terrell Fletcher's 12-yard run with 38 seconds left.

But Michigan, held to 10 first-half rushing yards, moved the ball up and down the field in the second half.

The Wolverines moved from the 2 to the Badgers 15 in the third quarter before Ricky Powers fumbled at the Wisconsin 13.

But on the next possession, Michigan quarterback Todd Collins completed a fourth down pass of 25 yards to Marc Burkholder to the Badgers 7. Two plays later, he hit Derrick Alexander for a touchdown with 2:06 left in the third quarter. That made it 13-10.

The Wolverines drove to a first down at the Wisconsin 32 early in the fourth before Jeff Messenger intercepted at the 17.

Michigan got in position again for a go-ahead score. Collins hit a 17-yard pass to Amani Toomer and Ed Davis carried twice for 20 yards. But Collins was sacked on a second-and-1 and threw incomplete on third. On fourth-and-eight he hit Walter Smith, who was stopped by Chris Hein at the 21 -- one yard short of the first down with 5:14 left.

Wisconsin then ran out the clock by driving to the Wolverines 20.

The Badgers dominated the first half behind the running of Moss but were only leading 6-3 before the 80-yard drive.

The Badgers had drives of 16 and 21 plays on their first two possessions, using up nearly 18 minutes, but managed only a 6-0 lead on field goals of 25 and 26 yards by walk-on Rick Schnetzky, making his first start in place of slumping John Hall.

Michigan had the longest play, however, a 54-yard pass from Collins to Toomer that went to the Badgers 7. Wisconsin then forced the Wolverines to settle for Peter Elezovic's 22-yard field goal.

Michigan played without injured tailback Tyrone Wheatley.

Metcalfe's future looking brighter

The Associated Press

CLEVELAND -- Cleveland Browns running back Eric Metcalfe says his father, three-time Pro Bowl player Terry Metcalfe, inspired him to aim for a football career.

"I never really thought about Terry Metcalfe as my Dad," Eric said. "I thought of him as a football player and that's what I wanted to be."

Terry Metcalfe played for the St. Louis Cardinals in the mid-1970s, and later played for the Toronto Argonauts and Washington Redskins.

When he was growing up, Eric realized quickly that baseball was not for him.

"I'm scared to death of getting hit in the head with the ball," he said. "I saw it happen to one of my friends when I was young."

Eric developed a lasting passion for basketball, but he knew football was the game for him.

He spent his early years with his mother, Christina Jefferson, in St. Louis. He went to live with his father in Arlington, Va., when he was a teen-ager.

Terry Metcalfe and Ms. Jefferson had met in high school but never married. Both later married others but have remained friends.

When Eric went to live with his father, Terry had just completed a one-year stint with the Redskins and was forced to retire because of an injury to his spine.

"I was a lost soul," said the elder Metcalfe, who admitted being heavily into cocaine and alcohol by that time.

"It was very hard for Eric to see me that way," he said.

But when Eric was in his second year with the Browns in 1990, his father checked himself into a treatment center. He now teaches kindergarten in a Christian school in Seattle and coaches youth league football.

"I can tell Eric is more relaxed now that he doesn't have to worry about where dad's at all the time anymore," he said.

But times weren't all bad when Eric was living with his father. Terry helped coach the offense and special teams at Bishop O'Connell High School in Arlington, Va., when Eric was a junior there.

After practice, Eric would go home and watch highlight films of his father and other players.

Metcalfe was recruited by just about every school in the country after he scored 35 touchdowns in his last two years at O'Connell and excelled in track. He chose the University of Texas, where he was a Heisman Trophy candidate and a two-time NCAA champion in the long-jump. He was drafted by the Browns in the first round in 1989.

Fans try to tear down the goal post at Camp Randall Stadium Saturday after Wisconsin beat Michigan 13-10 in Madison, Wis. About 75 people were injured when approximately 12,000 fans broke down two fences and raced out of the student sections onto the field.

80 injured after UW win

The Associated Press

MADISON -- The scene seemed natural: thousands of students euphoric after Wisconsin's victory over Michigan, spilling out of the stands and driving relentlessly toward the nearest goalpost.

Some realized immediately that something was dreadfully wrong, including football players who rushed to a pile of people at the north end of the stadium. But most others partied on, happy at having pushed past barriers and security guards to reach the artificial turf of Camp Randall Stadium.

Nearby, Aimee Jansen was fighting for her life, pinned with dozens of others near the stands.

"People were screaming for their lives, 'Oh my God! Oh my God!'" said Jansen, a 19-year-old sophomore.

At least 80 were injured, seven critically, on Saturday when a railing collapsed at the edge of the student section, sending fans tumbling into a 10-foot-wide gap between the stands and a 4-foot chain-link fence.

Others, pressing down from the top of the stadium, swarmed over those who had fallen en route to the wild on-field celebration.

One person remained in critical condition Sunday.

University of Wisconsin Chancellor David Ward said the school would immediately review what, if any, changes are needed before Saturday's home game against Ohio State.

Some students said players or other fans saved their lives.

Pinned with dozens of others in the narrow gap between the stands and the chain-link fence, Jansen was ready to pass out when a Wisconsin player came to her aid.

"He grabbed me by my pants and whipped me over," she said. "I know this football player was No. 3, and I know there are two No. 3's. I want to get hold of him because I do believe he saved my life."

Defensive back Kenny Gales and redshirt freshman quarterback Michael Brin both wear No. 3.

Jansen was treated at a hospital for an arm injury.

Offensive lineman Joe Panos said he went to the pile and began passing people to teammates.

"It was the scariest thing I've ever seen," Panos said. "I had to hop the fence to pull some people out of there who were unconscious. A couple of them were blue, literally blue. I thought they were gone."

The north goalpost was still standing minutes after the game, despite repeated attempts to knock it down, when an announcement silenced the crowd: "We have a pulseless nonbreather at the north end of the field. This is not a joke."

An ambulance was allowed to pass through the crowd, and officials swarmed in to help the injured.

Scott Norland, who attended the game with friends, said he pulled a woman from the pile.

"She had turned completely blue and lifeless," he said.

Norland said he and a football player he didn't know gave the woman mouth-to-mouth resuscitation and got her breathing again.

Police estimated that 12,000 people flowed out of the stands, some willingly, some caught by surprise.

Volleyball gains split after trouncing WMU

Falcons retain second place standing in MAC

by Mike Kazimore
sports writer

The first place Ball State volleyball team rolled into town Friday night, and then quickly exited with an even firmer grip on the top spot.

The Cardinals, 18-4 overall and 13-0 in the MAC, for all practical purposes, slammed the door on BG's chances of three-peat as regular season champions with a four-game 8-15, 15-10, 12-15 and 4-15 victory at Anderson Arena.

In the first game it was all Ball State as the experienced Cardinals jumped out to an early lead and then cruised to an easy win.

"I think that our blocking was a big factor as why they had such a strong start against us," head coach Denise Van De Walle said. "I didn't think that our blocking was effective at all in that first game, it almost seemed like they were always hitting on an open net."

The Falcons were able to regroup after that first game, however, and they bounced back to grab the second game 15-10.

With the score tied at 6-6 the Falcons, behind the strong net play of Carlyn Esslinger and the hard-hitting offensive attack of Jessica Andrasko, pulled out to an 11-7 lead. The Cardinals cut the lead to two at 11-9, however BG was able to hold on for the 15-10 win.

"In game two the tables turned a little bit," Van De Walle said. "They had a lot more hitting errors in that game and that really helped us. But part of the reason they had more errors was because of the fact that our defense really picked up and we served the ball a lot tougher in that game."

Game number three was a game of spurts, unfortunately for the Falcons it was the Cardinals offense that provided the last spurt and pulled out the win.

BG raced out to an early 5-2 lead as the spikers used the momentum gained in their game two win to propel them. However, the experience of BSU showed as the Cardinals, never panicking, were able to erase the Falcons lead and establish an 11-7 advantage of their own.

The Falcons then ran off three consecutive points of their own and appeared to have another after Nicky Mudrak stuffed an errant Cardinal pass. However, the point was disallowed and the Cardinals went on to score four of the next six points and wrap up the win.

"We had just rallied back and then there was that questionable call on Nicky's block of that overpass," Van De Walle said. "That call really broke our momentum and we were never able to recover."

Game five was almost an exact replica of game one as the Cardinals once again raced out to an early lead and then coasted in for the win.

"We had trouble establishing any kind of rhythm because of unforced errors," Van De Walle said. "It should have been a closer match but it wasn't because of all the errors that we made."

Saturday afternoon was a totally different story as the Falcons, playing almost error-free, trounced Western Michigan 15-11, 15-8 and 15-8. The victory raised the Falcons record to 12-7 and 9-3 in conference action.

"Our serving really improved against Western and I think that was really the key to our win," Van De Walle said. "We were more aggressive offensively and forced Western into making a lot of errors."

"We really served the ball tough and we constantly attacked them which we didn't do against Ball State," Van De Walle said. "We made their setter run the court quite a bit which I think disrupted their offense and caused them to make errors."

Another pleasing aspect of Saturday's win was the fact that the Falcons never suffered a lapse of focus which has been a problem for this year's squad because of its youth.

"Winning in three shows me that we are improving, and even though we're young we're capable of playing good volleyball."

"We still have to play very good volleyball the rest of the season to accomplish our goal of making sure that we're still playing volleyball over the Thanksgiving weekend," Van De Walle said.

Harris shines in Buckeyes win

The Associated Press

COLUMBUS -- Ohio State running back Raymont Harris is nicknamed the "Quiet Storm." But there was nothing quiet about his performance in a storm Saturday at Ohio Stadium.

Harris rushed for a career-high 151 yards and a touchdown as the third-ranked Buckeyes beat No. 12 Penn State 24-6 to remain on track for their first Rose Bowl bid in nine years.

The win kept Ohio State (8-0, 5-0 Big Ten) atop the league standings and virtually eliminated Penn State (5-2, 2-2) from title contention.

Illinois, Indiana and Wisconsin are tied for second at 4-1. Ohio State has games left against Wisconsin, Indiana and Michigan.

Penn State took a 3-0 lead when Craig Fayak kicked a 29-yard field goal on the game's opening drive. But Ohio State quickly countered with a 4-yard TD run by Harris and led the rest of the way in a game played in snow flurries and gusty winds.

The Buckeyes increased their lead to 17-6 at halftime on a 22-yard field goal by Tim Williams and a 25-yard TD pass from backup quarterback Bret Powers to Joey Galloway. They added a 4-yard TD run by Butler By'not'e in the third quarter.

Meanwhile, Ohio State's defense limited Penn State to a pair of field goals by Fayak, who became the Nittany Lions' career scoring leader. Entering the game, the Lions were second in Big Ten scoring with a 34-point average.

Harris, who carried 32 times, topped his previous high of 118 yards against Purdue last week and Illinois in 1990. It was the senior's fourth 100-yard game of the season.

Penn State's Ki-Jana Carter, from nearby Westerville, also had a big rushing day. He gained 123 yards on 24 carries.

The victory extended Ohio State's regular-season unbeaten streak to 14 games (13-0-1). It was the second straight defeat for Penn State, which had a week off after losing to Michigan on Oct. 16.

It was the first Big Ten meeting between the teams and first of any kind since the 1980 Fiesta Bowl. Penn State, playing its first season in the Big 10 after 106 years as an independent, had won five of its six previous games at Ohio Stadium.

Penn State scored on the game's opening drive when Fayak's kick hit the left upright and fell over the crossbar. It was the first time Ohio State trailed this season.

Ohio State came back and took a 7-3 lead on Harris' short TD run with 10:03 left in the quarter. The Buckeyes have scored on their first possession in every game this season.

Fayak's 49-yard field goal midway through the period cut it to 7-6 and broke Lydell Mitchell's school record of 246 points, set from 1969-71.

Sparked by two long, third-down passes from Bobby Hoying to Chris Sanders, the Buckeyes gained a first down on the Penn State 10 late in the quarter. But the drive stalled and Ohio State settled for Williams' field goal on the opening play of the second period.

Powers, a senior transfer from Arizona State, replaced Hoying on Ohio State's next possession and threw the TD pass to Galloway that put the Buckeyes ahead 17-6. After faking a handoff, Powell rolled right and hit a sliding Galloway in the end zone.

The drive started after safety Walter Taylor intercepted a pass by Kerry Collins at the Ohio State 36.

Kosar back in saddle again

The Associated Press

BEREA -- Bernie Kosar cannot pretend that it didn't hurt.

Two weeks on the bench left Kosar wondering if he had any future at all with the Cleveland Browns. Now, with Vinny Testaverde facing a long recuperation from a separated shoulder, Kosar finds himself forced to bury his differences with his coach so he can pick up where he left off.

"I'd be lying to say it hasn't been a difficult situation," Kosar said. "But as players we're definitely expected to turn the other cheek and to turn a blind eye to certain things."

Questions about Kosar's security as a starter began cropping up the moment the Browns began negotiating with Testaverde during the off-season.

Belichick and owner Art Modell insisted Kosar was in no danger of losing his job, but when Belichick pulled Kosar from a game in week three of the season -- just six days after Kosar directed an impressive Monday night win over San Francisco -- it suggested Belichick had preferred Testaverde all along.

In all, Testaverde made three relief appearances and two starts, both victories, before his season crashed to a halt when he was sandwiched between two defenders on a scramble in last Sunday's 28-23 win over Pittsburgh.

When Kosar ran onto the field to take over, he received a rousing ovation from a sellout crowd appreciative of his nine years of dedication to the city and the franchise.

"The two things that have really helped me maintain my sanity are the respect and support of my teammates and the respect and support of our fans," he said. "The fans have been fantastic. I mean, that ovation and the adrenaline that was flowing through me and through the stadium when I went out there was really special."

Although neither Kosar nor Belichick will admit openly that they can't get along, the evidence is overwhelming. Kosar hints that Belichick's offense is too confining; Belichick notes that the broken ankle Kosar sustained last year hasn't helped his mobility.

Animated conversations on the sidelines have been commonplace. Publicly, the sniping has been subtle but undeniable.

Complicating the situation has been Belichick's frequent juggling of the roster and lineup. He's reduced the playing time of middle linebacker Mike Johnson, the captain of the defense; released linebacker David Brandon and cornerback Everson Walls, both starters for much of the year; and refused to play fullback Kevin Mack, who returned to the team with great fanfare last month after retiring in July.

"It's been a little disappointing, a lot of the positioning and justifying of decisions that's gone on," Kosar said. "That's tough on any player, and it's happened around here to not only myself but to some other players."

"But as players, I think we do a good job of trying to block out some of those issues. Not to get too serious or to preach, but a lot of people know of my faith and my religious beliefs. A lot of that talks about doing your best and giving all you can and not really harboring any animosity."

Through it all, the Browns have thrived on the field. At 5-2 heading into their second bye, they are in first place in the AFC Central Division and in excellent position to pursue a playoff berth for the first time since 1989.

For his part, Belichick seems unconcerned about the damage the last few weeks might have done to Kosar's confidence.

"Football is competition," Belichick said. "That's what the sport is about. When you get an opportunity, you go out there and try to do it."

Women harriers meet MAC goals happy with accomplishing the first two.

The women's cross country team which was a sixth place preseason pick in the Mid-American Conference, showed a strong finish at the MAC Championships.

The Falcons accumulated 117 points, good enough for a fifth place tie with Kent State.

Western Michigan came away with the team victory at 67 points. In second place was Miami University with 77 points. Rounding out the top five in third place was Ohio University with 87 points.

"Overall we had a good performance," coach Steve Price said. "We accomplished two of our three goals."

The team went in to the Championships with the goals of being in the top five, placing two runners as All MAC and to finish in the top three. Coach Price was

The overall winner of the race was Western Michigan's Stacy Kilburn with a time of 17:30.

Bowling Green's individual times had Tracy Losi finishing in fourth place at 18:06, which is a personal record for her. With this finish, Losi was the first sophomore to finish at the meet.

The Falcons second runner was Laura Hall in eighth place at 18:26 making her the first freshman to finish.

"I am very proud of both Hall and Losi," Price said. "They were the best finishers in their class at the meet." The Falcons still have at least one more meet this season, with the District IV NCAA Qualifier meet in Bloomington, Indiana in two weeks.

"The District meet gives us one more opportunity," Price said. "We look forward to beating the teams that beat this year."

Miami tailback Terry Carter (20) avoids the attempted tackles of Bowling Green's Lee Boyer (58) and Vince Palko (30) during BG's 30-25 win Saturday. The win extended the Falcons unbeaten streak in the MAC to 21 games, while keeping them tied for first place.

Falcons hold on to beat Redskins

Ayers interception keys victory

OXFORD, Ohio — Saturday's Mid-American Conference contest between first place Bowling Green and ninth place Miami should have been a blow out. And in the statistics book it was, but the scoreboard painted a very different picture.

Through some sloppy play by MU's defense and poor weather conditions, the Falcons squeaked out a 30-25 decision. The victory maintained BG's 21-game unbeaten streak while raising their record to 4-0-1 in conference play and 5-2-1 overall. The loss drops MU to 1-5 in league play and 2-6 overall.

With 13:05 left in the game, back-up cornerback Steve Ayers stepped in front of Redskins' quarterback Danny Smith's pass and streaked 20 yards untouched into the Redskin endzone giving the Falcons a 23-12 advantage and the appearance that the game was in hand.

"Steve's interception was a big play because this was a game of highs and lows, and I think that play helped us gain momentum," BG head coach Gary Blackney said.

However, MU was not ready to roll over and hand Blackney and the Falcons the win.

Smith fired a pass to split end Gordon Benning, who ran for an 88-yard TD after Falcon defensive back Shane Foster missed the tackle.

"We lost containment against the flanker screen, and [Benning] ran down our sideline," Blackney said.

"I caught the screen pass and [tailback Terry] Carter made an excellent block and I saw the endzone," Benning said.

Falcon quarterback Ryan Henry, after a game of three interceptions and incomplete passes, ran 34 yards to the BG 33-yard line. On the very next play senior tailback Zeb Jackson took the hand off from Henry and squirted his way through the left side of the BG line and down the Falcon sideline 33 yards for the eventual game-winning score.

"The conditions and situations didn't permit me to have the kind of game that I wanted, but I went in there and did what I had to do," Jackson said.

The Redskins and Benning responded by doing what they had to do, when after the second play of the ensuing kickoff Smith hit Benning on a 10-yard out pattern in which senior flanker took the ball and made a move on the one man he had to beat, Falcon free safety Steve Rodriguez enroute

Gordon pleased with swimmers

The BG swim team showed some signs of promise this weekend at Cooper Pool. The Falcons hosted several teams in the Tom Stubbs Relays, a non-scoring event that annually begins the season for the club.

The womens' 300 yard breaststroke team got the squad off to a good start by setting a new meet record. The team of senior Josie McCulloch, freshman Alicia Kello and sophomore Cheryl Patterson shaved a half of a second off the old record to set the new mark at 3:20.37.

The womens' squad also won the 800 yard free relay, the 400 yard medley relay and the 1500 yard free relay.

Head coach, Brian Gordon seemed pleased with the womens' showing but kept things in perspective.

"We are not going to start out the season the way we did the last couple of years with our women overpowering everyone else, we had a veteran club then," Gordon said.

"I am concerned with our junior class," Gordon added. "They have to pick up their intensity and we have to get better performances out of them."

On the other hand, Gordon was happy with the efforts of sophomore Heather Williams and freshmen Kelly McCorkle and Michelle Pilling.

The mens' team didn't win as many races as the women did but they were able to leave with a win in the 300 yard breaststroke relay. This was the first time since 1988 that a BG mens' team won a race at the Tom Stubbs Relays. The winning relay team consisted of seniors Kevin Grotke and Roger Shaefer and freshman Andy Phelps.

"I think, in general, the mens' team did better than the womens'," Gordon said. "Just looking at the surface they seem to have more depth."

The men had a good showing considering they had most of their attention focused on next week's dual meet with Notre Dame.

"These were all sprint oriented races, 50's and 100's, and we were not ready to sprint, we are preparing for the 200's next week. I am pleased, in some respects, that we did sprint well because we are not doing a lot of speed work in practice," Gordon said.

Next week the Falcons will be keeping score as they start their dual meet schedule against Norte Dame and Wright State.

Hockey ties UM; defeats Broncos

by Brian Mart
sports writer

The Bowling Green hockey team passed its first big test of the young season by tying the Michigan Wolverines on Friday night and defeating the Western Michigan Broncos on Saturday night.

Both the Wolverines and the Broncos were picked to finish ahead of BG in both the Central Collegiate Hockey Association preseason media and coaches' polls.

Michigan, playing their CCHA opener, came out fired up on Friday and jumped out to an early 2-0 first period lead. Less than two minutes after Michigan's Ryan Sittler converted a power play goal, Wolverine captain Brian Wiseman drew Falcon goaltender Bob Petrie out of the net and slipped a backhand into the goal to provide the lead.

"We loosened up a little too much defensively early in the game," Petrie said.

Things did not look good for the Falcons. Michigan had the lead, and with All-American candidate Steve Shields in goal they had reason to feel good about their momentum.

However, the momentum lasted all of nine seconds, which was how long it took BG's Jamie Williams to answer Wiseman's tally. When Falcon left winger Brett Punchard converted a pass from Curtis Fry at the 9:42 mark to tie the score, the momentum had shifted.

Michigan's Jason Botterill and BG's Brian Holzinger added scores before the period ended, and the score was even heading into the intermission.

Both teams settled down defensively in the second period as neither team was able to dent the twine.

The Falcons took control in the third period, and appeared to have had the game won, thanks to two more goals by Holzinger.

"Holzinger just had a great game," Michigan head coach Red Berenson said. "He seems to always play well against us."

Down 5-4 with 55 seconds left in regulation, Berenson pulled Shields in favor of an extra attacker, and the move payed off as Botterill notched his third goal of the game with just 40 seconds left.

Both teams had opportunities to score in overtime, but the game ended as a 5-5 tie.

Many Falcons had bittersweet feelings about the stalemate.

"We're upset that we allowed them to score with less than a minute to go," Holzinger said. "We try not to let the other team score with less than a minute left in any period, let alone the third. On the other hand, it was a great comeback for us to fight our way back into the game after falling behind 2-0."

"The big thing is that we played well," Falcon head coach Jerry York said. "We got a tie game with a good effort. You have to look past the points in this situation."

Saturday's game against WMU had all the pre-game makings of another close battle. The Broncos came into town with revenge on their minds after they were eliminated in the opening round of last season's CCHA playoffs by the Falcons.

The fortunes of both teams would ride on their specialty teams, as the most popular seats in the arena were located in the penalty boxes. There were 32 penalties totalling 72 minutes called against the two teams.

Jeff Herman got the Falcons on the board first after coming out of -- where else -- the penalty box. Herman served two minutes for high-sticking and as he exited the box after the Falcons killed the penalty, he saw the puck crossing the WMU blue line.

Herman proceeded to advance the puck toward the goal and passed to an open Fry, who beat Bronco netminder Brian Renfrew on his glove-side for the goal.

"It was kind of a funny play," Herman said. "I didn't know if the puck was offside or not, so I just played it out and found Curtis open. He did all the work."

WMU's Jeremy Brown tied the score six minutes later when he blasted a shot from just behind the far circle that deflected off Petrie's glove and landed in the net.

The Falcons regained the lead at the 9:37 mark of the second period as Jeff Wells sent a pass through the crease to an open Jason Clark who poked the puck past a helpless Renfrew.

Despite numerous opportunities, the Falcons could not convert chances into goals during the rest of the second period.

"It was 2-1, yet we were getting great chances," York said. "I thought we were in control but the scoreboard didn't tell the same story that I was seeing."

In the third period, the Falcons' inspired specialty teams took control of the game. After a BG penalty, Sean Pronger stole a pass and headed down the ice with Tom Glantz on a 2-on-1. Pronger's pass to Glantz deflected off his skate, but he recovered in time to send the puck back to Pronger, who netted it as he flew past the goal for his second short-handed score of the year.

Todd Reirden, Pronger, and Glantz added goals later in the third period.
